Two Reasons
For Selling the Best Drugs
FIRST—We don't think it is right to sell any but pure drugs. We would not give poor drugs to our families; neither will we give impure drugs to you.
SECOND—It pays to sell pure drugs. Every prescription, every dose of salts, every ounce of spice, every medicine, whether for you or your cow, is pure, just as pure as it is possible to get them. Don't you think such a policy as this pays?

THEIR GOLDEN WEDDING.
Lines written by Ninian Cooper, of Reynoldsville, in honor of the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hutchinson, of Hancock. (The "Squire" is represented as talking thus with his wife.)

Dear wife, old friends have gathered here,
This golden day of wedded life,
Reminding us 'tis fifty years,
Since we were married, man and wife.

Fifty years have come and gone,
Since you became my bonnie bride,
God's mercy and his goodness still
Have kept you ever by my side.

Sons and daughters strong and true,
Have blessed our home, made glad our life;
They cheered our hearts, made strong our arms,
And blessed our union, man and wife.

They come to-day with wishes well;
Flesh of our flesh, blood of our blood;
They've loved us well, they love us still,
God bless and keep them, do them good.

We've had our trials, too, dear wife,
Such clouds to flock our sunny days,
To lift our hearts to him above,
Who leads us through our life's ways.

We've known the loss of loved ones dear,
They've gone before, not gone away;
They call to us to meet them there,
And to dwell with them in glory.

Our hearts were bowed with deep distress,
An anguish deep and bitter sailing;
But God has blessed us all our days,
His tender mercies never failing.

So dear old friends of youthful days,
Reminding us of days long past,
As round our board you kindly come,
Reminding us of time's swift fleeting.

Yes! fifty years it is to-day,
Since we were married, man and wife,
And pledged our faith and troth to each,
For life or death, for ill or good.

Together we have kept our vows;
Our love, the same, has never been blighted,
And now to-day we both rejoice,
And bless the day our troth was plighted.

We're happy still and glad will be,
When angels' voices whisper, "Come,
You've borne the burdens long and well;
The Master's voice, come home."

In God's good time we'll meet our own,
And soon these loved ones here will come,
All are here, a family joined,
In heaven at last our Father's home.
